

Table with multiple columns and rows containing technical data, likely a specification or test protocol. The table is extremely dense and contains many small cells, some with numerical values and some with text. It appears to be a detailed technical drawing or data sheet.